INTRODUCTORY.

Since the issue of the first City Directory of Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou, three years since, there has been a marked growth in the former and latter named cities, and some signs of improvement in Colorado City. The present work is made necessary in view of this prosperity and the many changes made in consequence. We offer it with the hope that it may prove a help and convenience to all who may have occasion to consult its pages. To all who have assisted us in the work we tender our thanks.

July, 1882.

The town of Colorado Springs is located on a beautiful plateau in the valley of the Fountaine qui Bouille on the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, seventy-five miles south of Denver, and forty-five miles north of Pueblo, in latitude $38^{\circ} 50' 0.28''$, and longitude $104^{\circ} 49' 15.1''$, according to Prof. Dean of the U. S. Coast Survey. It is situated about five miles from the base of the mountains which here rise suddenly from the gently rolling prairie without the intervening foot-hills so common to mountain ranges. Immediately west of the town Pike's Peak, the great landmark of the Rocky Mountains, rises to an altitude of 14,336 feet, its snow-clad summit being accessible by good trails from the Springs, can be readily reached on horseback in five or six hours, the round trip being now frequently made in a day.

The town was founded by the Colorado Springs Company in 1871, the first stake having been driven upon what was then the open prairie, on the last day of July of that year. The town site as originally platted and recorded included an area of about 300 acres, but it has since been greatly enlarged by several additions and now covers some 1,600 acres. The streets, which are laid out at right angles run nearly north and south and east and west, the former being over two miles and the latter about three-fourths of a mile in length. They are from 100 feet to 140 feet in width. The blocks are each four hundred feet square, and are divided by alleys twenty feet wide, running generally north and south. The lots in the centre or business part of the town are 25 feet front by 190 feet deep. The residence lots are generally 50 feet by 190 feet, but many of those in the suburbs of the town are much larger. The land surrounding the town site is laid out into ten, twenty and forty acre pieces, many of which are well cultivated, and otherwise improved. The town is amply supplied with irrigating water, which is carried through sixty miles of main and lateral canals along each side of every street, outside of the sidewalks. Along these canals, at intervals of twenty-five feet, have been planted over seven thousand shade trees which are growing rapidly and give the town the appearance of a vast grove. Water for drinking and culinary purposes is obtained from Ruxton's creek, five miles to the westward, a stream that has its source in springs near the top of Pike's Peak. It is carried by gravity through twenty miles of cast iron pipe throughout every part of the town. The supply is ample for a population of twenty thousand persons, and in purity and healthfulness it is unexceptionable. The water rates are lower than in any town or city in the State. The city is also supplied with gas at very reasonable rates by the Colorado Springs Gas and Coke Company.

The educational interests of the town are carefully attended to. The public school building is one of the finest structures in the State. Colorado College, one of the most flourishing institutions of learning in the New West, is located here. Its magnificent new building and ample campus, including one hundred acres of valuable ground in the northern portion of the town, excite the admiration of all who visit the place. In addition to the above there are several private schools for the young.

All of the principal religious denominations are represented here. The Episcopalians, Baptists, Presbyterians, Cumberland Presbyterians, Methodists, Methodists South, Congregationalists, Christians and Catholics have well built churches and large and growing congregations.

The present population of the town, July 1, 1882, is about 6,500, not including the many persons—probably numbering fully a thousand—who are always temporarily stopping here for health or pleasure.

A large mercantile business is done in Colorado Springs. About $175,000 worth of wool is marketed here annually. El Paso county, of which Colorado Springs is the capital, now stands at the head of the wool producing counties of the State. Probably 200,000 head of sheep are now pastured upon its luxuriant grasses. The wool clip from these the past season aggregated over 800,000 pounds. A large number of individuals and firms are engaged in wool growing in the county, most of them residing in, and all drawing their supplies from Colorado Springs. This is also the centre of a large trade in horses and beef cattle.

The livery business is conducted on a large scale, there being no fewer than five establishments of the kind in the town. Several of them are not exceeded with respect to the kind and quality of their stock by any in the State.

There are three banks in Colorado Springs, the First National, Peoples', and El Paso County, which justly rank among the soundest financial institutions in the west.

A fine Opera House with a seating capacity of 800, and finished in elaborate style furnishes a place of amusement to the residents of the city.

A commodious hotel is now in course of erection, and will be supplied with all of the modern conveniences.

The Denver and New Orleans railroad, which passes within a few miles to the eastward, runs fine Tally-Ho coaches for the conveyance of passengers to and from the trains. A line will be built to this place at an early day.

The altitude of Colorado Springs, 6,000 feet above the level of the sea, its protection in a great measure from the north and west winds, by the Divide on the north and the mountain range on the west, render the climate of this locality one of the most salubrious and delightful to be found in the world. Its altitude and proximity to the mountains temper the summer heat, the nights during that season being always cool enough for comfort. During the autumn and winter months the atmosphere is dry and invigorating with almost uninterrupted sunshine. But little rain falls during the autumn and none in the winter, and usually the snow fall is confined to the spring months when the ground being warm, it soon melts away. Thousands of invalids of all classes flock hither and to Manitou, and nearly all find relief from their respective ailments, while very many, particularly those suffering from asthma, throat and lung troubles, dyspepsia and general debility, are permanently cured.

The scenery around Colorado Springs is of the most beautiful and varied description. Within an hour's drive of the town, over magnificent roads, can be seen some of the grandest combinations of natural views upon the continent. Among the places which should be visited by all who come to this locality are the following:

CHEYENNE MOUNTAIN, over the new carriage road leading through beautiful mountain scenery to Beaver Park, and by the Seven Lakes to the summit of Pike's Peak.

CHEYENNE CANON to the falls of Cheyenne Creek.

MANITOU, with its celebrated mineral springs.

UTE PASS and the falls of the Fountain.

IRON SPRINGS in Engleman's Canon.

MANITOU CANON and Cave of the Winds.

SUMMIT OF PIKE'S PEAK, either by Bear Creek or Ruxton's Creek.

MANITOU PARK in the mountains, 25 miles from Colorado Springs.

GARDEN OF THE GODS.

GLEN EYRIE.

MONUMENT PARK.

AUSTIN'S BLUFFS and ranch.

Of the view of the mountains from Colorado Springs an able writer says:

"The main range itself is out of sight, but Pike's Peak and Cheyenne Mountain, two of the grandest mountains in the whole system, are in full view, each magnificent with a glory of its own; and there is a symmetry, yet a diversity, in the whole scene that is presented to the vision, which is, we believe, unique.

Immediately in the foreground, run the Monument and the Fountain, their course marked by a luxuriant growth of Cottonwood and Willow, and the rich bottom land along their borders quickly coming under cultivation. Beyond, there stretches a long line of low hills, or rather the cliffs of a long plateau, known as the "Mesa," its surface level almost as a table (whence its name), and its long straight line contrasting sharply with the serrated mountains behind. Opposite to the point of view, the Mesa is broken through, allowing the passage of the Fountain which runs down from the west, and then, receiving the tribute of the Monument, turns somewhat sharply towards the south. To the left, Bear Creek and Cheyenne Creek, hastening also to pour their waters into the Fountain, break up the surface of the Mesa, and relieve its uniformity by their groves of Cottonwood and other trees.

Looking a little to the right, the vermilion rocks of the Gate of the "Garden of the Gods," which lies in a hollow on the far side of the Mesa, are seen rising above its level, and the "Hog Back," of which they form a part—a curious series of upturned and shattered sand-stone rocks—can be traced some distance to the left, somewhat like a long double wall following the contour of the lower spurs of the Foot-Hills.

Straight in front, rising to a height of 14,336 feet, and apparently but four or five miles distant (though really fourteen or fifteen) is Pike's Peak.

No other Peak of the whole system possesses such an interest as this, for, though it lacks a few feet of being the loftiest, its associations give it a paramount importance. Long ago it was the beacon-tower from which the red men telegraphed with flaming signals to their comrades far away upon the plains or amongst the Parks and Mountains. And in later days, it has generally been the first point seen by the traveler crossing the Plains. It was on the 15th of November, 1806, that Major Pike, in command of the first expedition sent out to explore this region by the War Department, caught sight of the Peak which has ever since bore his name. Then with one accord he and his small party gave three cheers for the "Mexican Mountain." In 1858, the "Pike's Peak gold fever" set in, reaching its culmination in the following year, when thousands made their way from all parts of the States to the new El Dorado, confident of speedy fortune. To such the Peak was the great landmark for which they eagerly strained their eyes, day after day, in their toilsome pilgrimage, and the first sight of it gave a fresh impetus to their energy and courage as their visions of wealth drew nearer and clearer. Now, the traveler, as he is borne rapidly and comfortably along the iron highway, looks out impatiently from his cushioned car in search of the same great beacon.

As seen from Colorado Springs, Pike's Peak is a dome-like summit, with a long broken spur running in a north-westerly direction. The lower portion of the mountain is hidden by the Foot-Hills in front, which seem to lead up to its slope by a series of gradual ascents; but the whole bulk of the mountain from below timber-line to its summit, is in full view, sublimely beautiful, wrapt in snowy vesture, and resting in eternal calm, continually renewing its spotless garment from the darkest, angriest storms, and flinging back the brilliance of the sunniest skies.

Southward, the view terminates in Cheyenne, a mountain hitherto of comparatively little note and of no great height, but of remarkable beauty. Unlike Pike's Peak, its whole mass is in full view, and it has a completeness and an integrity which impart to it a particularly majestic character, while it possesses all the variety and picturesqueness which belong to the Foot-Hills rather than to the great Peaks.

III.

In technical studies in the Department of Mining and Metallurgy, there are special courses in (1) Assaying, (2) Blowpiping, Qualitative and Quantitative, including Determination of Minerals, (3) Chemical Analysis, Qualitative and Quantitative, with addition of General and Applied Chemistry.

Students are earnestly advised to take some one of the regular courses of study. In this way the best results will be secured. Persons who cannot attend school long enough to complete a regular course, are received as special students in such branches as they are competent to pursue with profit.

EXPENSES.

The tuition for the Fall Term is $10; Winter, $7.50; Spring, $7.50. Instruction in Assaying costs $20.00 and the cost of the material used.

Table board at the Young Men's Club, about $3.25 a week; at the Young Women's Club, $2.50 and work an hour a day and half a day Saturdays. Those who wish to board themselves can do so and live well at a cost of from $2.00 to $2.50 a week; furnished rooms may be obtained for this purpose.

Room rent costs fifty cents if two occupy one room; fuel, lights and washing, usually $1.00 a week.

EARNINGS.

Young men who do not fall behind in their studies and who prove to be faithful in work can earn enough to pay their expenses, or any part thereof, during one term or the whole year. The work is usually farm labor in summer and in the wood yard in winter; wages, fifteen cents an hour. Young women will be furnished with some form of household labor to an amount sufficient to meet the whole or a part of the current expenses. Those who do house work, or engage in other labor suitable for women, can earn their entire expenses by five hours a day.

The school year comprises thirty-five weeks; fifteen weeks before and twenty after the holidays, the latter term being divided by a recess of one week.
