INTRODUCTORY

At the foot of Pike's Peak, the "monument of the continent", are spread out the three cities of Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou. While each maintains a separate government, they form practically one community—a community which has attracted the attention and admiration of the traveler, the homeseeker and the invalid.

Nature here has been lavish with her choice possessions of pure air and mountain spring water, life-giving sunshine and diversified scenery of unsurpassed grandeur. Within a radius of six miles are to be found some of the most noted of America's scenic attractions: the summit of Pike's Peak, the Garden of the Gods and Mushroom Park, Cheyenne Canons, the "High Drive", Ute Pass, Crystal Park, Williams Canon and the Cave of the Winds, Glen Eyrie, Palmer Park, Mt. Manitou, Cripple Creek the world's greatest gold camp, reached by the famous Short Line, and a score of other spots of great scenic beauty.

Colorado Springs is a modern city which takes pride in its exceptional advantages as a residential center. It is an ideal city of homes, and has a population of 52,110. The city owns its mountain water system valued at more than $3,500,000; and has sixty miles of sewerage system perfected at a cost of $250,000. A modern electric railway, and up to date lighting and telephone systems are also maintained. The city's park system, provided largely through the generosity of Gen. Wm. J. Palmer, founder of the city, embraces more than 2,000 acres and is unexcelled in variety and size. It includes Monument Valley Park, Palmer Park, North Cheyenne Canon and the High Drive, numerous small parks and street parking areas and to it shortly is to be added the Garden of the Gods. Colorado Springs has long taken rank as an educational center. The public schools of the three cities maintain a high standing while at Colorado Springs is located Colorado College, the oldest institution for higher learning in the state. The Colorado Institute for the Deaf and Blind is also located here. The city is an ideal spot for the location of national homes and is the site of the Union Printers' Home and the Modern Woodmen of America Sanitarium.

While pre-eminently an all-the-year-round resort for the invalid and tourists, Colorado Springs' industrial development finds expression in the three large gold reduction works, in numerous brick yards, an are pottery, three railroad yards and other industries. Extensive coal deposits are found north of the city.

Colorado Springs altitude is 6,035 feet, that of Manitou 6,335 feet. This region has long held an international reputation of being one of the greatest health and pleasure resorts in the world. The atmosphere is absolutely aseptic and free from germ life, and its curative qualities are attested by the permanent recoveries from pulmonary troubles. Colorado Springs' fine weather is very nearly a continuous blessing: The year round, the sun shines for nearly 70 of every 100 hours it is above the horizon. Weather records show that for the last 23 years there has been an average of 180 absolutely clear days and 128 partly cloudy, making a total of 308 days of sunshine.
