PPLD offers free wireless access to Library patrons. All wireless users are expected to act in a lawful and respectful manner, and are required to conform to the conditions of PPLD’s Internet Use Policy.

The Library uses a filter to prevent access to sexually explicit images. Users must recognize that technology is imperfect and that it is therefore not possible to block everything that might be considered objectionable. Although the Library makes every effort to provide secure access to the Internet, users are at risk for loss or theft of information and should take appropriate precautions with personal information while using the Library network. Information transmitted could potentially be intercepted. Do not transmit sensitive information (credit card numbers, passwords, account information) while using wireless access. Wireless devices must be configured with anti-virus protection using current virus definitions.

Use of the Library’s wireless network is entirely at the risk of the user. PPLD is not responsible for any information that is compromised or lost through use of its wireless access. This includes damage or loss due to:

- Electrical surges
- Breaches of security by viruses or hacking
- Disruptions to wireless service
